

The Alchemist's Heir

John J Mathis

www.alchemistsheir.com
alchemists.heir@gmail.com

About The Author

John is a child of the 1970s and grew up around Indianapolis, IN. In his youth, he played sports, delivered newspapers, went cow tipping, and studied music. He enjoyed college so much that he took six years to complete a four year program. He graduated from Marian University with degrees in both English and Music and a secondary teaching license.

He is an award-winning bass/baritone soloist who was the youngest member of the Indianapolis Opera Theater, opened for the Oak Ridge Boys, and performed for President Reagan all before his twentieth birthday. (To his knowledge, he is the only music major from Marian who gave his senior recital in six languages and showed up to his piano boards wearing a hat that said 'Remember the Alamo'.)

Life pre-empted his desired Master's Degree in ancient medieval literature and led to an interest in pharmaceutical research which he pursued for more than a decade. During this same period, he returned to school to become a registered nurse. Always curious, he physically traveled to Western Europe, the Caribbean, Canada, and nearly all fifty of the United States; he was arrested only once. Since it was Russian police, he says it doesn't count.

His mental 'travels' include astral projection, ghost hunting, remote viewing, Usui Reiki, and Silva Mind Method. Although he had never stared at goats with any degree of malfeasance, his enthusiasm in metaphysics and mental dynamics is continually renewed.

After publishing several shorter works of poetry and prose, this is his first novel; it was inspired by 9-11 and focused by a near death event. John hopes to provide additional, albeit non-traditional, tools to help those who are the subject of being bullied. These tools are seeds that can be planted today, harvested tomorrow and provide a bounty for a lifetime.

Further information is available at www.alchemistsheir.com. Questions or comments for the author can be directed to alchemists.heir@gmail.com.

